Aida's Silver Jewelry

Aida Sabha wanted her first retail shop to be in the center of the city – a place where people could eat, drink, shop and live all in one place, much like in her hometown of Mexico City. When she discovered the initial vision for the Old Town District, she knew it was the right place for her to open her business and raise her daughter Jamila. Today, this dynamic mother-daughter duo collaborate to create the storefront of their dreams, selling big brands like Vera Bradley and Brighton alongside locally made goods. Learn more about their story by watching their Possibility People story.
